movie, or television series

Settings Tables

The following pages provide space for you to build a world from scratch or bring in elements from your favorite setting.

It's often simpler to start small with the tables and only work on a subset of the entries (six or twelve or eighteen) at a time. Grow your tables as you need and you'll soon have a rich and complex game world represented in just a few pages.

- 6 entries: Fill just the  entries and roll 1d6.
- 12 entries: Fill the  and  entries and roll 2d6 with one of the dice representing even or odd.
- 18 entries: Fill the , , and  entries and roll 2d6 with one of the dice reading  for 1-2,  for 3-4, and  for 5-6.

Random Characters

To create a random character or NPC, roll or choose once from the Backgrounds, Factions, and Special Items tables, and twice on the Skills table. If your setting includes magic or paranormal abilities, you can substitute either or both Skills with rolls or choices from the Spells, Rituals, or Powers tables.

Backgrounds

What professions, ancestries, and social classes exist in your world? How are they positioned and viewed in the larger context of your setting?

Factions

What groups and organizations are vying for power and influence? What do they want and what forces can they bring to bear?

Special Items

What unique items or technologies exist in your world? What effects do they possess? Who might know about them and seek them out?

Skills

Outside the broader expertise and talents granted by Backgrounds, what other competencies are useful when adventuring in your world?

Spells, Rituals, or Powers

What occult, religious, or paranormal abilities exist?
What are their effects? What happens when they're performed incorrectly? How can they be countered?
